by Stephen Gowans, September 10, 2018. The United States has a new strategy for Syria, according to The Washington Post and The Wall Street Journal. The new direction, however, is simply the old, largely unrecognized, one, transformed from a de facto status to official one by presidential authorization. In other words, an aggressive US policy on Syria will continue to be implemented—one the US ...

A very useful analysis of the key dynamics of the war in Syria. Gowans does an excellent job of situating the war in terms of the United States' ongoing war against Arab nationalism, which poses a clear threat to imperialist interests; genuine Arab unity, independence and socialist orientation is anathema to a global economic and political order that is designed by Wall Street.
